This is made possible by subjective inwardness, but must account for the objective, and then finally the subjective interpretation of such. (Here is Kierkegaard's real "leap of faith" to God, as I would understand it.) There is a swing between 2 poles: peak inward subjectivity; full account of the objective; peak subjective interpretation ...

Inwardness and Existence: Subjectivity in/and Hegel ...

"Subjectivity is, first of all, inwardness and passion." It is a commitment, not a mere discovery or "correctness." Subjectivity is the realm where we find that very special sense of existence from which "existentialism" will eventually get its name. It is living fully, which may not be outwardly evident.

Subjectivity as Truth. When subjectivity, inwardness, is truth, then objectively truth is the paradox; and the fact that truth is objectively the paradox is just what proves subjectivity to be truth, since the objective situation proves repellent, and this resistance on the part of objectivity, or its expression, is the resilience of inwardness and ...
